

Welcome from the Headteacher

I feel privileged to be the Headteacher of Highfield High School, and I would like to thank our pupils, parents and staff for their hard work and their many, many contributions over the years. It is a pleasure to be part of such a vibrant and caring school. Highfield is part of the Excellence in Blackpool initiative aimed at improving our facilities and our standards of achievement.

Highfield is involved with local and national work with regards to standards of teaching and learning.

The school enjoys a high reputation within the community and is heavily oversubscribed. Late applicants are directed to the authority for placements in other schools.

We concentrate on our aims in developing our pupils to become responsible citizens of both our school and our local community. I believe our ethos is clear. We believe that everyone has the right to learn. This is achieved through hard work, respect for others and cooperation. All of this will lead to the highest possible levels of achievement and personal fulfilment for everyone.

We welcome new pupils, parents, staff and volunteers to join us in the continued development of Highfield High School. We strive to give all pupils the quality of education and support which we would expect for our own children. Nothing less is good enough.

Ian Evans B. Ed., NPQH

Headteacher, Mr Evans with Year 7 pupils celebrating the publication of their poetry in a national competition.